A year on The Middle East region is a crowded place these days, with a host of regional conflicts and four major wars raging in the region. While war in the Middle East will not be ending any time soon, it is important for all of us to look back and reflect on what the past 12 months have looked like in the Middle East. The first thing to remember is that the Middle East is home to more than 20 million people, with over a billion more to come. It is estimated that the region will have somewhere between 660 million and a billion residents by 2040. This is going to be a region of booming populations, but it will also be a region of conflict. Most countries in the Middle East have a high fertility rate, which means there are fewer people dying from the effects of old age. Although the region is home to 9 of the 10 world's Muslim countries, it is still a developing region when it comes to modernization and social change. As a result, most states in the Middle East are still based on a command economy. In fact, countries in the Middle East are moving towards a market economy in line with most of the rest of the world, but the Middle East has a unique set of challenges to face 2d92ce491b
